D. Work Environment

The Communications Officer position requires a candidate with a high level of professional interpersonal skills and excellent communications ability, who is capable of working as part of a busy communications team and comfortable dealing with multiple projects and priorities, including fielding requests from the media, preparing speeches and presentations and organizing and co-coordinating media releases and press conferences.

The successful candidate must demonstrate a high degree of professionalism in his or her work and must be capable of demonstrating excellent judgment, initiative and discretion.

Frequent overtime may be required during evenings and weekend. Occasional travel may also be required.

Time Pressures: The incumbent occupies a busy and demanding position, which requires regular multitasking and the ability to deal professionally with a high volume of work. The person must be capable of dealing with competing demands and priorities and highly organized in his or her work. A maximum amount of flexibility is required in order to ensure that media monitoring and analysis responsibilities are carried out in a timely fashion so that the Office is kept and current and up to date on emerging items at all times.

The incumbent must work effectively and efficiently with minimal supervision, taking the initiative to find solutions to any problems that occur and to identify creative ways to improve the quality of service provided. While the incumbent is expected to work with a high degree of autonomy, he or she must also exercise good judgment by consulting where appropriate.

Effect of Errors: The incumbent is expected to apply office policy and procedures and to act with a high degree of professionalism at all times. Failure to present a professional, courteous and competent image or to provide accurate and timely information to members of the public or the media has the potential to have adverse impact on the Office, its credibility and reputation and ultimately its operations. Failure to provide timely, professional and high-quality communications support internally could also impact negatively on the Office's profile with the media and the public, its credibility and reputation and its operations.

Freedom to Make Decisions: The incumbent works independently in a structured environment and must take initiative in organizing the day-to-day functions of the position. The incumbent's work is generally guided by policy but must exercise discretion in an appropriate and professional manner. The person must also exercise good judgment and consult where appropriate.

Interpersonal Contacts: The incumbent is expected to deal with inquiries from members of the media and the public, including interest groups and stakeholders, and to liaise with service providers as well as those involved in professional organizations and events being organized by the Office. All communications must be handled with a high level of professionalism, courtesy and respect and demonstrate a high level of competency commensurate with the position.
